Asbestos Behind Bars

The door slams shut, the key rattles: Momo now is alone in his nine square meter prison cell. The 19-year-old is facing nine years for a crime that his uncle Amar and his cousins boldly framed him for. His career as a professional football player, which he thought was secure, is suddenly out of reach; instead, he has to cope with the tough prison system. His only support is the prison football team. While his girlfriend and his mother worry about the desperate inmate, clan boss Amar blackmails him hard: Only if Momo submits to him and starts dealing in prison he will grant "protection". How long can Momo hold on to his resolve not to become a criminal?

REEPERBAHN – Special Unit 65

Season 1

REEPERBAHN – Special Unit 65 is a US-style cop show about Germany's first-ever police unit to fight organized crime. The story takes place in the 1980s in Hamburg's notorious red-light-district, coined „the planet's most sinful mile“. It combines fictional scenes and archive to depict the battle between good and evil through a heady mix of love, murder, drugs, and power.

Bella in the Belly

Bella in the Belly tells the story of 5-year-old Benny and his little sister Bella – so little, in fact, that she's yet to be born. A very special relationship forms between the two siblings. Despite being separated, they can communicate. Sounds and voices filter through to Bella in the womb. Using her imagination, she brings them to life and creates objects she can play and interact with. Meanwhile, Benny visualizes Bella inside his mother. But Benny doesn't just use his imagination to solely play. It also comes in useful when there's a problem to be solved. The siblings overcome each challenge by thinking out of the box – and out of the belly.

SOS: Save Our Species

This visually arresting two-part documentary looks at the everyday lives of conservationists across the globe. Grant Burden protects the elephants and black rhinos of the Serengeti. Liu Yidan hunts down illegal bird trappers and traders. In Norway, Fredrik Myhre is combating overfishing. All of them are motivated by a shared passion: to save our planet – often at great personal risk. Footage of burning forests and heavily armed personnel looks like it was shot in a war zone, while other images reveal swathes of as-yet unspoiled nature whose pristine beauty takes our breath away.

Life at the Coast

The Bay of Lübeck tends to be associated with sun, sandy beaches and a fresh breeze. Germany's third largest Baltic Sea bay is rich in unique dune landscapes, rugged cliffs and bustling seaside resorts. But few people know that it is also home to some truly remarkable creatures, such as the otter, the Arctic tern, the wart-biter and the now endangered lapwing. The filmmakers travelled the length of the picturesque coast, from Fehmarn to Travemünde, to explore unspoiled landscapes, natural oases and an astonishing array of animal life.

Secret Water Wilderness

Between Berlin and the Baltic Sea lies one of Germany's most biodiverse regions: a labyrinth of lakes, forests, hills and valleys, many of them still underexplored. The area is home to large birds of prey: the white-tailed eagle and its much rarer cousin, the lesser spotted eagle, and the osprey. The crystal clear waters of the region's lakes are teeming with life: pike stalk their prey, 'corals of the north' flourish, otters hunt for food, and European pond turtles build their nests on the shore. Northern Germany's secret wilderness is a prime example of successful conservation.

Wild America

150 Years of National Parks in the U.S.

150 years ago Yellowstone became the first national park to receive protected status. For this occasion a spectacular one-off episode was created showcasing the best scenes and most moving moments from the eight-part series. The original series, co-produced on a multi-million budget with National Geographic, took more than a thousand days to film, and is one of ARD's most ambitious and visually stunning wildlife documentaries to date. It takes us from the Arctic to the Everglades, visiting America's best-known national parks.

Ice Age Europe

The Gift of the Glaciers

The ice sheet that shifted from Scandinavia to Central Europe was massive. Measuring several thousand metres in diameter, it pushed rubble and debris across the continent to form Denmark and Northern Germany. Meltwater created a huge lake that broke through a chalk ridge connecting Calais to Dover, and separated France from Great Britain. France's Channel coast emerged; Germany's federal state rose from the ground. Europe truly is the gift of the glaciers.

mareTV

Our oceans are the source of all life on our planet, and an enduring symbol of hope and yearning. They cover more than 70% of the Earth's surface, but have been explored less than the moon. mareTV examines how we have harnessed our seas' potential – as a human habitat, a field of scientific research, a workplace, and a place of leisure. Join a crew of Spanish fisherfolk harvesting shellfish and feel the force of the waves as they crash against the rocky coastline. Come along and watch the annual ice golf championship off the shores of Greenland. And hold your breath while Hawaii's best pilot takes his plane down to skim the breakers.
